

Grocery Store Help

This idea was created to help parents who have trouble with taking their children to the grocery store. The materials used for the first item were just a sheet of construction paper, laminated for durability and then Velcro squares on the front for however many items you want your child to look for at the store. There is a pocket on the back to store the picture symbols after they find that item. An old spice jar may also be used as a "grocery list". Clean it and take the label off and put Velcro squares all around. Put your choice of pictures on the outside and when the child finds their items they can pop the lid of the jar and put the pictures inside. This offers the child a visual, when all items are found; the child is all done at the store.

Idea submitted by Sarah Yates of West Chester, PA